The plaintiff, Dr. Anthony Bernard Jones, Sr. (“Jones”), a self-represented pre-trial detainee, filed this action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. This matter is before the court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b) and Local Civil Rule 73.02(B)(2) DSC for a Report and Recommendation on Jones’s motions requesting a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction. (ECF Nos. 48 & 54.) The defendants filed a response in opposition. (ECF No. 56.) Having carefully reviewed the motions and the pleadings in this case, the court finds that the plaintiff’s motions should be denied.

DISCUSSION

Jones filed the instant action alleging that on June 5, 2012, he was assaulted and injured by inmates during a riot that occurred at Lee Correctional Institution (“LCI”). He claims that he did not timely receive adequate medical treatment for his injuries. In his motions, Jones seeks a temporary restraining order against non-defendant LCI employees for allegedly denying him access to the courts and retaliating against him for filing the instant lawsuit.¹ He requests to be transferred from LCI to a different institution. (ECF No. 48.) The only defendant in this action mentioned in either of Jones's motions—Defendant Warden Michael McCall—appears to be mentioned only in a supervisory role, as Jones does not specifically allege any retaliatory acts by Warden McCall.

“Preliminary injunctions are not to be granted automatically.” Wetzel v. Edwards, 635 F.2d 283, 286 (4th Cir. 1980). Such relief regarding the administration of a state prison should be granted only in compelling circumstances. See Taylor v. Freeman, 34 F.3d 266, 269 (4th Cir. 1994). Moreover, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit has long recognized the “wide ranging deference” that the judiciary must show prison administrators with regard to matters within their discretion. See Wetzel, 635 F.2d at 288 (discussing the complexities of running a penal institution and the reluctance of federal courts to interfere in the problems of prison administration). Furthermore, there is no constitutional right for a prisoner to be housed in a particular institution, at a particular custody level, or in a particular portion or unit of a correctional institution. See Meachum v. Fano, 427 U.S. 215, 225 (1976) (holding that the Constitution's Due Process Clause does not “protect a duly convicted prisoner against transfer from one institution to another within the state prison system”); McKune v. Lile, 536 U.S. 24, 39 (2002) (noting that the “decision where to house inmates is at the core of prison administrators' expertise”).

A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish all four of the following elements: (1) he is likely to succeed on the merits; (2) he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief; (3) the balance of equities tips in his favor; and (4) an injunction is in the public interest. Winter v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008); The Real Truth About Obama, Inc. v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 575 F.3d 342, 346-47 (4th Cir. 2009) (vacated on other grounds by 130 S. Ct. 2371 (2010) and reissued in part by 607 F.3d 355 (4th Cir. 2010)), overruling

Blackwelder Furniture Co. of Statesville v. Seilig Mfg. Co., 550 F.2d 189 (4th Cir. 1977).² A plaintiff must make a clear showing that he is likely to succeed on the merits of his claim. Winter, 555 U.S. at 22; Real Truth, 575 F.3d at 345-46. Similarly, he must make a clear showing that he is likely to be irreparably harmed absent injunctive relief. Winter, 555 U.S. at 20-23; Real Truth, 575 F.3d at 347. Only then may the court consider whether the balance of equities tips in the plaintiff's favor. See Real Truth, 575 F.3d at 346-47.³ Finally, the court must pay particular regard to the public consequences of employing the extraordinary relief of injunction. Real Truth, 575 F.3d at 347 (quoting Winter, 555 U.S. at 24).

Based on the record currently before the court, Jones has not satisfied the required elements and has failed to demonstrate that these circumstances warrant the extraordinary remedy he seeks. Winter, 555 U.S. at 22 (stating that a mere possibility of harm is not sufficient to warrant injunctive relief). Furthermore, in their response in opposition to Jones's motions, the defendants contend that Defendant McCall is no longer working at LCI, and is therefore not in a position to have direct contact with Jones. Moreover, to the extent Jones seeks injunctive relief against non-parties, such relief is not available. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(a).

² The portions of Real Truth that were reissued by the Fourth Circuit are Parts I and II found at 575 F.3d at 345-47, which are the sections addressing injunctions that are relied upon in the court's Report and Recommendation.

³ Based on Winter, the Real Truth Court expressly rejected and overruled Blackwelder's sliding scale approach, which allowed a plaintiff to obtain an injunction with a strong showing of a probability of success even if he demonstrated only a possibility of irreparable harm. Real Truth, 575 F.3d at 347; Winter, 555 U.S. at 21-23.

RECOMMENDATION

Accordingly, the court recommends that Jones's motions for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction (ECF Nos. 48 & 54) be denied.
